

Monica Castendada, M.S.W., has worked as a social worker in Public Child Welfare Services since 2005. She provided in-home weekly visitation, conducted child risk-based intervention assessments, and acted as a facilitator with special skills in Spanish for the Team Decision Making Unit. Prior to her work at a county agency, she was a trainer for mandated reporters for the Child Abuse Prevention Council. She has also worked as a group coordinator for a children's home, where she supervised and trained child care staff to assess child development issues. Castendada received her master of social work degree from California State University.
