

Gregory Manning, Ph.D., is a licensed psychologist and earned his doctorate in clinical psychology from the California School of Professional Psychology. Manning has provided training nationwide to a wide range of audiences on topics related to child welfare and mental health. Manning has extensive experience working in multiple capacities within government, non-profit community, and mental health agencies. Manning is a faculty member at the University of Redlands in the Graduate School of Education and Brandman University: Department of Psychology.