

Jayne McKown, B.A., is a supervising juvenile probation officer and federal case reviewer. She has wide experience in all aspects of juvenile probation, including placement and corrections. McKown has developed curriculum and taught Standards and Training for Corrections training in use of force policy and procedure, institutional incident report writing, professional ethics, delinquency, and demographics, as well as training for trainers. She serves on the Probation Advisory Committee for the Resource Center for Family-Focused Practice and Northern California Placement Committee.