

Jarred Vermillion has worked with families and communities for nearly a decade and has provided support for administrators, direct line staff, families, and communities. He has progressed in Wraparound and worked in many different roles – as youth partner, parent partner, facilitator, and manager. He owns a consulting firm and works as a Wraparound fidelity specialist with a provider agency in Southern California. He has received many awards recognizing his commitment and leadership in supporting youth and families. In particular, he focuses on applying Wraparound principles to non-traditional systems. He has demonstrated a passion for helping individuals understand Wraparound concepts beyond the initial on-boarding, with additional program consultations, and trainings. Having survived the trauma of growing up across several systems of care with an incarcerated father and a mother struggling with addiction, Vermillion uses his life experience to spark a passion for breaking down system barriers and laying the foundation for compassionate engagement to support families. He works as the teaming specialist for the Resource Center for Family-Focused Practice, UC Davis Continuing and Professional Education.
